Dedication

This thesis is dedicated to my dearest friend, Dr. Nadia Lokma, without whose love and support I could not complete this task. She is my conscience. I remain ever her devoted friend.
Acknowledgments

I would like to express my deepest gratitude to Dr. George Scanlon, Dr. Bernard O’Kane, and Dr. Chahinda Karim, who generously shared their wealth of knowledge and provided a model of scholarship that elevated us all. However, it behooves me to reserve a special thanks to my thesis advisor, Dr. George Scanlon, whose knowledge of and experience in the field of archaeology in the dār al-Islam, inspired me to pursue this topic. He was firm but encouraging in pushing me along this long and arduous task. I would also like to thank Dr. Alan Walmsley, who gave me the opportunity to participate in my first excavation in Jordan, which fortuitously led to the topic of my thesis.

I could not have carried out my research without the numerous resources available at the Rare Books and Special Collections Library (RBSCL). I am indebted to the staff at the library for their assistance. I am also thankful to the Interlibrary Loan and External Resources staff for diligently finding the articles and book chapters unavailable at RBSCL and sending them my way. Above all, I am grateful for the friendships of two remarkable women, Conchita Anorve-Tschirgi and Yasmine Abdallah, whose time and office I intruded on frequently, but without whose kindness, I could not imagine my time spent at the library as rewarding.

Finally, I would like to thank my mother, who remained a source of enormous strength and encouragement when I faltered.
Table of Contents

List of Figures
vii

Chapter 1: Historical Introduction and Overview of Islamic Archaeology
1
Introduction
1
Historical Overview
2
Overview of Islamic Archaeology
6

Chapter 2: Catalogue of Domestic Structures
16
Introduction
16
‘Ammān
16
Geographical and Historical Setting of Site
16
Excavation of Domestic Structure at Site (Area C)
18
Stratigraphy (Area C)
19
Chronology (Area C)
23
Excavation of Domestic Structure at Site (Museum Site)
24
Stratigraphy (Museum Site)
25
Chronology (Museum Site)
26
Jarash
26
Geographical and Historical Setting of Site
27
Excavation of Domestic Structure at Site
28
Stratigraphy
28
Chronology
37
Naḥal Mitnan
41
Geographical and Historical Setting of Site
Excavation of Domestic Structure at Site
Stratigraphy
Chronology

Pella

Geographical and Historical Setting of Site
Excavation of Domestic Structure at Site
Stratigraphy
Chronology

Umm el-Jimāl

Geographical and Historical Setting of Site
Excavation of Domestic Structure at Site (House XVIII)
Stratigraphy (House XVIII)
Chronology (House XVIII)
Excavation of Domestic Structure at Site (House 119)
Stratigraphy (House 119)
Chronology (House 119)

Chapter 3: Analysis of the Archaeological Material

Introduction
Building Material
  Wall construction material
  Floor construction material
Roof construction material 79

Building Layout 80

Elementary courtyard process 81

Taberna process 83

Insula process 84

Subdivision process 86

Bayt 88

Function of Household 89

Relation of Building to Street 93

Chapter 4: Conclusion 97

Urban and Rural Houses in the Early Islamic Period 97

Houses within an urban context 97

Exchange of urban and rural domestic forms 101

Conclusion 104

Bibliography 109

Figures 117
List of Figures

1. The five provinces (ajnād) of early Islamic Syria-Palestine, after c. 685 (from Walmsley, Early Islamic Syria, fig. 7).

2. The transformation of the colonnaded avenue into the linear bazaar of Damascus (from Sauvaget, “Laodicée,” fig. 8).

6. Section over Sector 8 for fortification wall in Area C, and the area outside the wall, looking north (from Northedge, Roman and Islamic ‘Amman, fig. 142).

8. Area C street, showing later Stratum III surface and buttressing of Umayyad Building B (from Northedge, Roman and Islamic ‘Amman, pl. 68a).

18. Geographical extent and major towns of the jund of al-Urdunn in the early Islamic period (from Walmsley, “Friday Mosque,” fig. 2).

19. Typical Pre-Reform (Arab-Byzantine) issue from Jarash (from Walmsley, “Friday Mosque,” fig. 3).

20. General plan of Jarash (from Walmsley, “Friday Mosque,” fig. 1).

21. South Decumanus area, general plan (from Gawlikowski, “Residential Area,” fig. 1).

22. The cistern loc. 43, SE corner; to the right, the stylobate foundation (from Gawlikowski, “Residential Area,” pl. IIA).

23. The cistern loc. 43, seen from the east (from Gawlikowski, “Residential Area,” pl. IIB).

24. The north-west house, with the Umayyad House in the foreground (from Gawlikowski, “Residential Area,” pl. IVB).

25. Umayyad House, view of existing restoration by A. Ostrasz (from Gawlikowski, “Jerash in Early Islamic Times,” fig. 2).

27. Entrance to a shop above cistern loc. 43, on Umayyad foundations (from Gawlikowski, “Residential Area,” pl. VB).

28. The Umayyad Period House (from Gawlikowski, “Residential Area,” fig. 2).

29. Entrance to the Umayyad House, above the sewer (loc. 12) (from Gawlikowski, “Residential Area,” pl. VIA).

30. Room 7 as seen from its window-sill (from Gawlikowski, “Residential Area,” pl. VIIB).

31. Room 10/20 looking from inside the door (from Gawlikowski, “Residential Area,” pl. VIII A).

32. Loc. 20 from the west; to the left, the late wall between the arch piers (from Gawlikowski, “Residential Area,” pl. VIII B).

33. The underground Room 26 seen from the east (from Gawlikowski, “Residential Area,” pl. VIB).
34. The early Abbasid period (from Gawlikowski, “Residential Area,” fig. 3).

35. Northern part of the Umayyad House; behind the wall, loci 21, 23 and 25 (from Gawlikowski, “Residential Area,” pl. IIIA).

36. Early Abbasid period house, first dwelling (from Gawlikowski, “Residential Area,” fig. 3).

37. Early Abbasid period house, second dwelling (from Gawlikowski, “Residential Area,” fig. 3).

38. Early Abbasid period house, third dwelling (from Gawlikowski, “Residential Area,” fig. 3).

40. Lamps recovered from house (from Gawlikowski, “Residential Area,” pl. XIV).

41. Red-painted pottery from Jarash: bowls, 8th century (from Gawlikowski, “Jerash in Early Islamic Times,” fig. 4).

42. Unglazed lamp from al-Fusṭāṭ (from Scanlon, “Lead Glazed Wares,” fig. 11).

44. The elements of the Naḥal Mitnan farm (from Haiman, “Early Islamic Period Farm,” plan 2).

45. Early Islamic period farm at Naḥal Mitnan (from Haiman, “Agriculture and Nomad-State Relations,” fig. 11).

46. The excavated farmhouse of Naḥal Mitnan, looking east toward Courtyard 111 and the east bank of Naḥal Mitnan (from Haiman, “Early Islamic Period Farm,” fig. 2).

47. The excavated farmhouse (from Haiman, “Early Islamic Period Farm,” plan 3).

48. Courtyard 101 and Room 102 at the rear (from Haiman, “Early Islamic Period Farm,” fig. 5).

49. Room 105, looking west (from Haiman, “Early Islamic Period Farm,” fig. 6).

50. Room 104, looking east (from Haiman, “Early Islamic Period Farm,” fig. 7).

51. Wall detail (from Haiman, “Early Islamic Period Farm,” fig. 3).

52. Glass weight from the time of ʿAbd al-Malik b. Yazīd (from Lester, “Glass Weight,” fig. 1).

53. Pottery from Naḥal Mitnan (from Haiman, “Early Islamic Period Farm,” fig. 8).

55. The borders and administrative centers of Umayyad jund of al-Urdunn (from Walmsley, “Pella/Fihl after the Islamic Conquest,” ill. 1).

56. Map of archaeological areas at Pella (from Walmsley, “Households at Pella,” fig. 1).

57. Area IV. Schematic plan of Byzantine Phases I-II (from Watson, “Byzantine Period,” fig. 26).

58. Area IV. Schematic plan of Byzantine Phases III-V (from Watson, “Byzantine Period,” fig. 27).

60. View east showing walls of Byzantine Phases IV-V and intrusive graves (from Watson, “Byzantine Period,” Pl. 118b).

62. General plan of mid-8th century housing at the east end of the main mound at Pella (from Walmsley, “Households at Pella,” fig. 3).

63. The central internal courtyard and western flanking rooms in House G (from Walmsley, “Economic Developments,” fig. 10).

64. Detailed plan of House G (from Walmsley, “Households at Pella,” fig. 12).

65. Marble panel and columns recovered from House G (from Walmsley, “Pella/Fihl after the Islamic Conquest,” ill. 4).

68. Pella pottery wares 6-7, 9 (from Walmsley, “ Tradition, Innovation, and Imitation,” fig. 5).

69. Pella pottery ware 8 (from Walmsley, “ Tradition, Innovation, and Imitation,” fig. 6).

70. Pella pottery wares 16, 17, 18, and 19 (from Walmsley, “ Tradition, Innovation, and Imitation,” fig. 9).
71. Map of the world of Umm el-Jimāl in Late Antiquity (from De Vries, Umm el-Jimal, fig. 43).

72. Plan of Late Antique Umm el-Jimāl (De Vries, “Continuity and Change,” fig. 2).

73. Plan of House XVIII showing locations of trenches C.1, C.2 (from Brown, “Large Residence,” fig. 139).

74. Cantilevered stairs in northern façade of the courtyard (from Brown, “Large Residence,” fig. 140).

75. Façade of the eastern complex, inside the courtyard (from Brown, “Large Residence,” fig. 141).

76. Façade of western complex, inside the courtyard (from Brown, “Large Residence,” fig. 142).

77. Façade of southern side of courtyard with entrance in the center (from Brown, “Large Residence,” fig. 143).

78. Method of corbelling (from De Vries, “Umm el-Jimal Project, 1972-1977,” fig. 2).

79. Stairs at the north-western corner of courtyard (from De Vries, “Umm el-Jimal Project, 1972-1977,” fig. 3).

81. Double window of House XVIII, western face (from De Vries, Umm el-Jimal, fig. 66).

82. Basalt door in eastern exterior wall (from Brown, “Large Residence,” fig. 144).

83. Doorway into side room on western side of courtyard in House XVIII with device to relieve lintel (from De Vries, Umm el-Jimal, fig. 77).

84. Cistern entrance in corner below floor corbels (from Brown, “Large Residence,” fig. 150).

85. Corbelled cistern roof viewed from below (from Brown, “Large Residence,” fig. 152).

86. Cobble and plaster floor (from Brown, “Large Residence,” fig. 146).

89. Doorway and manger in Stable A (from De Vries, “Umm el-Jimal Project, 1993 and 1994,” fig. 6).

90. Doorstep of entry into Stable A (from De Vries, Umm el-Jimal, fig. 72).

91. View toward south wall of Room C in House 119 with flagstone paving and cement flooring in foreground and under meter stick (from De Vries, “Umm el-Jimal Project, 1993 and 1994,” fig. 8).

92. Jarash lamp fragments no. 1 (from Lapp, “Byzantine and Early Islamic Oil Lamp Fragments,” fig. 1).

93. Jarash lamp fragments nos. 2, 3 and 4 (from Lapp, “Byzantine and Early Islamic Oil Lamp Fragments,” fig. 2).

94. Late Byzantine to early Islamic Lamps (from Kehrberg, “Selected Lamps and Pottery,” fig. 5).

95. Schematic rendering of wall construction (from De Vries, Umm el-Jimal, fig. 64).

96. House at Il Medjdel, Syria: plan and elevation (from Ellis, Roman Housing, fig. 17).

97. House at Karanis, Egypt: plan and elevation (from Ellis, Roman Housing, fig. 19).

100. Reconstruction of the housing in the Forum of Nerva in the ninth and tenth centuries (from Valenzani, “Residential Building,” fig. 11).

102. The central and north area of the citadel in Umayyad times (from Almagro and Arce, “Umayyad Town Planning,” fig. 2).

103. ‘Anjar, plan (from Hillenbrand, “‘Anjar and Early Islamic Urbanism,” fig. 1).

105. View of the Civic Complex at Pella from the north, showing the church atrium (rear) and adjacent markets (foreground) (from Walmsley, “Economic Developments,” fig. 9).
106. Plan of central Jarash in the mid-eighth century, showing the inserted mosque and related commercial structures, including new shops abutting the mosque’s east wall (from Walmsley, “Economic Developments,” fig. 20).

107. Aerial photograph of Jarash taken in the late 1920s and in the possession of Walmsley (from Walmsley, “Friday Mosque,” fig. 5).

108. Preliminary schematic representation of the principal features of Islamic Jarash (from Walmsley, “Friday Mosque,” fig. 7).

109. Plan of a private house at Ur (from Woolley, Excavations at Ur, fig. 13).

110. Reconstruction of a private house at Ur (from Woolley, Excavations at Ur, fig. 14).

111. Plans and section of typical Islamic house in Ṣan‘ā’ (from Lewcock and Serjeant, “Houses of Ṣan‘ā’,” fig. 22.1).

112. Prophet’s house-mosque, Medina (from Creswell, Early Muslim Architecture, fig. 7). (a) Before change of qibla; (b) After change of qibla.