United Nations Secretary General Ban Ki-moon Appoints Ambassador Sameh Aboul Enein as an International Expert

UN Secretary General Ban Ki-moon has appointed Ambassador Sameh Aboul Enein, adjunct professor of international security and disarmament in GAPP and visiting professor for security studies at the University of East Anglia, as an international expert in the United Nations special experts group on cyber security, high-tech communications and information security in the field of international security.

The UN experts group will meet regularly in New York and Geneva over 2014 - 2015 to examine and develop a possible UN cooperation framework on cyber security to present to the UN secretary general and the member states in the General Assembly.